ACCOUNT
 Of the late Proceedings of the
Dissenting Ministers
 A T
Salters-Hall, &c.

Reverend SIR,

OUR publick Character hath drawn upon you the Trouble of this Address: amongst the best Judges, you have the Reputation of an honest, open Mind, and a conformable Behaviour in Life; I cannot therefore deny my self the Satisfaction of congratulating with you in this publick Manner, upon the Dawnings of Liberty, and the Propagation of generous Principles amongst a People who have been too justly charged with Narrowness, and too-limited Conditions of Communion with their Fellow-Chritians.

You cannot be insensible how these Qualities have sometimes given it into the Power, even of the Nations Enemies, to throw them out of all Competitions for Power, by authoritative Acts ; and how the best Friends to the Government, and to the Protestant Interest in general, have been pleased with them rather at a Distance, than in a Condition to draw out their Principles into Action : But a wise, generous Administration, hath again thought fit to Trust them, and in Return for such a Confidence, have they bravely resolved their future Conduct upon such Terms of Freedom, as that Administration it self, is manifestly conducted upon, and on which only, Life it self can be made tolerable to all Men in subordinate and dependent Stations ; especially as to their Choice in Matters of Futurity, and what concerns their eternal Happiness.

I am informed, that upon some Difference, and Misunderstandings amongst the Dissenters in many Parts of the Country, and particularly in and about Exeter, several worthy Gentlemen, out of a real Concern for the publick Interest, and the Honour of the Legislature, who were labouring for their Ease and Welfare at that very Conjunction, did signify to many Ministers of chief Note in London, how acceptable it would be, to put a Stop to such Differences; and that at the same Time, with all due Deference, did they suggest the Means to effect such a good Design.

These Differences, it seems, had their Rise from some late Disputes concerning the Doctrine of the Trinity; whereupon some weak Christians, of more Zeal than Charity, took it into their Heads to be uneasy in Communion with such as they were jealous of on that Account; and insisted upon a Defection from some Articles, or Forms upon that Head, to be a sufficient Ground of Excommunication, or Exclusion. This Ignis Expurgatorius, this holy Flame, was kindled up in many Congregations. A Rejection of, or a Refusal to Subscribe certain humane Interpretations of this Doctrine, was by the Zealots termed,

A Congregation at Stoke-Newington, hereupon, thought fit to call upon their Minister, to declare his Faith on this Point; and for his non-compliance herewith, and continuing to preach up Charity, Forbearance, brotherly Love, and for waving Controversies so much above humane Comprehension, they made the Pulpit so uneasy to him, as at least ended in an entire Separation.

A dissenting Congregation in London, called upon a Member upon the same Jealousy, and for want of Satisfaction in his Answers, and his not coming up to their Standards of Orthodoxy, did the charitable Mr. Bragg, their Minister, proceed in the Name of the Congregation, to forbid him their Communion.

Many Congregations in the West, grew so warm on this Account, as to call upon their Ministers to declare hereupon, and to give Expectations of bringing Things to such an Extremity, as would be not only a Scandal to the Dissenting Interest in particular, but to the Christian Name in general.

To put a Stop, therefore, to these growing Evils, it was advised to settle such Articles, or Conditions of Communion, nion, in a large Body of Ministers; as should not justify any Proceedings to Exclusion, or Excommunication, but upon very extraordinary Occasions; and that such should be sent to their Brethren in the Country, under all possible Inducements of Advice, and Perswasion, to be received as the Measure of their Proceedings, in all Church-Dealings and Censures.

This I am informed, was very chearfully and readily complyed with; and due Notice was thereupon given to all the approved Ministers in and about London, to meet; and several Heads were drawn up to be Debated upon, and Settled, in the usual Form and Manner of such Assemblies, by a Majority; the Decisions of which Majority were to be deemed the Acts of that Assembly, and reported as such to their Friends and Brethren in the Countries, who were intended to be served and governed thereby.

I need not observe to you, how natural it is to expect Warmth, Heat, and a Behaviour that deserves worse Appellations, from such a Convention of Clergy, if our Measures of judging may be taken from Precedents in like Cases. But such Indecencies of Zeal and Wrath as had no Influence upon the Issue of those Proceedings, and served only to expose the Actors to Ridicule or Compassion, I shall forbear relating to you, and take Notice only of what was of some Consequence to those Debates.

The most controverted Part, in the Course of these Proceedings, was with relation to some Points of Faith; and particularly the Doctrine of the Trinity. By some it was judged necessary to be express upon the main Articles of the Christian Religion, as set forth in some Creeds, Catechisms, &c. in order to justify the Purity, and Orthodoxy of their Faith; but these were opposed by others, who were for enlarging the Conditions of Communion, so far, as to affect none of the same Faith in Essentials, but only Cases of Imorality, and the like; who were for having only the inspired Writings, in the very Letter thereof, to be made a Standard of Faith, and a Test of Church Membership; and who were equally against all Forms, Interpretations, or Dictates of fallible Men, in Matters of so great Consequence, and what regarded eternal Salvation.

But upon this Head it was, with more than ordinary Vehemence, urged by some, to be express and full as to the Doctrine

Doctrine of the Trinity, in opposition to the Growth of Arrianism, and certain Notions supposed not consistent with several received Creeds, Catechisms, and Confessions upon that Point: And this was pressed as an essential Boundary of Faith and Communion, and without a Subscription to which, a Person could not be so much as deemed a Christian, or a fit Member of a christian Congregation. Hereunto were objected, not only the Reasons which were before produced against all humane Forms, and Interpretations, but because, likewise, it was making themselves a Party with those they were about to reconcile, and be a Means rather to widen, than heal those Differences that had their Rise upon that very Account.

In the Debates upon this last Head, you may remember, Sir, what Pains were taken to perplex and disguise the Matter in Controversy, and to mislead several in the Question expected to be put thereupon. Those on the Affirmative, That some express Articles, or Interpretations on this Head, should be made a Standard, &c. thought fit to prescribe their Belief in the Form of one of the Articles of the Church of England, and two Answers in the Assemblies Ca- tecbism, relating thereunto, and used great Diligence to represent a Refusal thereof, on this Occasion, a virtual Denial of the Doctrine therein contained, and an abetting, and declaring for, the Heresy of the Arians. This, therefore, put a hard Task upon the Negative Side, to convince many, that the Case before them was not with relation to any ones particular Belief concerning that Doctrine; but that the Question to be put, was only, Whether any humane Interpretations thereof should be made a Test of Christian Communion, or the Form of Expression only made use of in the inspired Writings; and the more effectually to remove the false Light, this was artfully thrown into by the other side, many of these were forced to declare their Assent to, and Belief of, that Doctrine as contained in the mentioned Forms, but opposed only its being made a Test to others, as a Condition of their Church-Membership, who might, perhaps, be not willing to be limited, or tyed up in their Confessions, and Declarations of Faith, to any other than the Words of Inspiration.

The Conduct of some hereupon, you cannot but reflect upon with Concern. The Intention of their Meeting was often ten found necessary to be reminded to them, viz. to put a stop to Differences already grown scandalous and prejudicial to their common Interest as Dissenters; to justify the Favours then doing for them by the Legislature, in their deserving them, by a peaceable and forgiving Deportment towards one another; and to answer the Request of those worthy Gentlemen, who, out of a true publick Spirit, and a general Good, had intimated to them the Reasons for their Meeting: But either the Zeal, the Pride, or Impatience in Contradiction, of many, threw all these Regards into Neglect, and, with a very indecent Haughtiness, did Mr. Bradbury, in particular, demand, Whether that Assembly was to be directed by the Laity? With the same ungoverned Passion, did another also ask, Whether they came there to be contradicted by Anabaptist Teachers? Because, it seems, some of the opposite Side were of that Perswasion. And that Person was seconded by an equal ebullition of Wrath and Indecency, against the same Denomination; but they were retorted upon with a just Resentment, by one who was affected by that invidious Distinction; who told them, The Persons they aimed at, were not Anabaptist Teachers, but

Baptist Ministers, of which Name they were not ashamed; the former Appellation denoting Re-Baptism, which they disowned.

After a great deal of Bustle, Heat, Invective, and over-bearing Treatment, the Question was, with great difficulty, put, as before limited. On the appearance of Hands, the Affirmatives, with great Triumph, assum'd the Majority; but a Division was insisted upon, and the Negatives were to go up into the Gallery. While this was doing, it was very indiscreetly called out by some Person, You that are against Persecution, come up Stairs! Which was pretty evenly ballanced by one on the other side, calling out, You that are for the Doctrine of the Trinity, stay below! Whereupon, Justice was demanded on both sides for those Affronts, and wilful Perversions of the Question, but the Equality of the Offences made both sides relax those Demands, so that no part of their Jurisdiction was exerted upon this Account. Upon telling, the Affirmatives were 53, and the Negatives 57, so that it was carried by a Majority that no humane Compositions, or Interpretations of the Doctrine of the Trinity, should be made a Part of those Articles of Advice, they were met to draw up, and agree to.

On

On this, the Affirmatives went out of all Patience, and Decency, and their forward Leader, Mr. Bradbury, thought fit, in his great Modesty, to call them the scandalous Majority, talked of Protesting against the Validity of their Decision, and required somewhat equivalent to a Scrutiny upon the Qualification of some Voters. The other, as far as could be permitted them, for Clamour and Contradiction, went on in Form upon further Matters laid down in the original Scheme of Pacification, and at last adjourned to that Day Seven-night.

The Affirmatives, who I beg leave to call Orthodox, because it is a Name they very fondly arrogate to themselves, met according to the foresaid Adjournment; but, after long and studied Perplexities, very openly told them of their Resolutions to embarrass all their Proceedings, without they came into their Measures; and, at last, resolved separately to Sign such Forms as had been rejected in open Majority. After this Division, some Overtures were made for a Re-union; but the Majority were too well aware of the Consequences to come into them, and therefore proceeded in the Form at first agreed upon, till they had finished the proposed Design.

I purposely omit mentioning any Persons by Name, unless the sprightly, the facetious, and the Orthodox Mr. Bradbury ; because, on one Side, I am unwilling to let fall so much Censure and Reproach personally, as they may expect to meet with from the most equitable Judges, who are for Candour, Humanity, and a true christian Forbearance : And on the other Side, I dare to say, not one desires Acknowledgments of their Merits, in opposing the most detestable Imposition imaginable, a religious Slavery ; but a Person of Mr. Bradbury's forwardness for Distinction, might perhaps be picqued at being lost in a Crowd, and hip'd in not being remarkable, tho' to his own Shame. But I shall have occasion to do him yet further Honour, before I finish my Epistle to you upon this novel Subject.

Before I finish my Narrative of this Affair within Doors, I cannot omit taking notice with how much Pleasure I heard it related concerning the Behaviour of one of the Seniors of this Assembly. This reverend Person, it seems, had been misled by the Bustle and Misrepresentations of the grand Question, so as to divide with the Orthodox ; but upon a Recollection of his Mistake, at the folfollowing Meeting did he with great Clearfulness declare himself, and out of the fulness of an honest Heart, with Tears of Joy, did he congratulate his Brethren; upon the noble Appearance they had made for christian Liberty : And tho' he told them, as to the Doctrine occasionally mention'd, that he concurred in the manner expressed by the Articles offered as a Test, yet he added, That he was far from imposing such Explications upon his Brethren, because the Imposition of any Thing of humane Contrivance, as necessary in Matters of Religion, and eternal Salvation, charged a Defect upon the Institutions and Commands of our Saviour ; assumed a Right of Legislature ; and was the highest Affront possible to the inspired Writings, which alone were to be the Rule of Faith. This introduced a general Concurrence, as to the Usefulness of Forms, Creeds, Catechisms, Confessions, Interpretations, &c. to be used by all Persons as they found their Capacities suited to be informed and edified thereby ; but by no means would they allow them a Competition with the sacred Writings, or to be Tests of Church-Membership.

While these Matters were in Transaction, and by Wranglings were drawn out into a needless Length; one of the chief Ends intended by the Weight and Authority of their Decision, was intirely frustrated. For three dissenting Congregations in the West-Country, proceeded to actual Exclusion of their Ministers, for their refusing to subscribe such Articles of Belief as they, by the Help of some neighbouring Ministers had thought fit to draw up, and impose upon them as a Test. And these were no less Men than Mr. Pierce, Mr. Withers, and Mr. Hallet. The first hath done more Honour to the Dissenting Interest, by his Defence against the Apology for the Church of England, by Dr. Nicholson, and many other of his learned Writings, than all its Advocates besides; put together; the second has, beyond any one of his Brethren, pleaded their Cause, and justify'd them at a late Caprice of State, when the Government were bearing hard upon them, and, as fast as possible, hastening their Destruction: And the last is a Person eminent in common with the two former, for a worthy, honest Man, a good, useful Neighbour, and an exemplary Christian. Mr. Pierce, however, in particular, under this Circumstance, has has this comfortable Reflexion in his Power, whenever he pleases, that he has a Parallel to his own Case; in a Divine of the Establish'd Church, and to whom it is the highest Honour to have any likeness. Mr. Pierce has seen the Church's best Defender, reviled and slandered in the most shameful manner, by those in her own Communion, only because with his great Abilities to plead her Cause against foreign Enemies, there was also join'd an Integrity of Heart, that would not suffer any Encroachments, Impositions, or humane Innovations, in her Discipline, or Worship, without the warmest Opposition; and who, as much as in them lay, was rendered not one of them, for no other Reason, but that he was the honestest amongst them. However, at length a virtuous Administration did some Justice to so much Merit, and has rewarded him with one of the highest Stations in that Church, to which he had done so much Service and Reputation in a lower Sphere. And it is not to be doubted, but such a Gentleman; and such a Christian, as Mr. Pierce, will find more real Satisfaction, and Comfort in the Friendship and Congratulation of good Men, and the returns of a good Conscience, than in the mean Compliance to Priestcraft, or Biggotry, if Providence finds not out some more remarkable Way of doing Justice to his Integrity.

Thus, Sir, I have given you this Relation, as it is brought to us, of the Laity, but those who attended upon the whole Affair, and who think it not a Breach of Confidence, or a Disgrace to their Order, to submit the Actions of the Clergy, to the Approbation or Censure of their Friends. And this I trouble you with, not for your particular Information, because you had, as I hear, a Share therein your self, but to observe to you upon a few Heads, wherein this Spirit of Imposition, which (thank God) now is dwindling away, is highly unreasonable; and to remark a little upon its Rise, in order somewhat further to expose it the Dislike of those who are yet weak enough to be tainted therewith.

And, in the first Place, I desire it may be asked these Orthodox Gentlemen, What Conception they must imagine the Government, and their fellow-Subjects must have of them, when they consider this Part of their Conduct? The Legislative Power has generously taken take off a great deal of that Load they groaned under, and put them upon a Foot of Liberty equal with other Subjects, and in return for the Favour, are they now shackling one another: Nay, before that very Bill had passed the Houses in Parliament, which was for making them easy from others Impositions, did they begin with these spiritual Tortures, and, as fast as possible, hasten to lay their own Brethren under a holy Bondage. What must those of the establish'd Communion think of these Men, who found there Dissentions therefrom upon the Imposition of humane Forms, and Matters of humane Contrivance and Authority, and yet practise the same Impositions themselves? Why may not their Brethren be at liberty, and be excused in so doing, to chuse their own Manner of declaring their Faith, and expressing their Sentiments of Matters touching Salvation, as well as they themselves expect to be justified, in dissenting from the National Church on the same Account? And if the National Church may not impose Creeds, and Articles of Faith upon them, why should they do it themselves upon their Brethren? If a sufficient Power was to take Advantage of this Creed-making

Spirit, and require peremptorily their Compliance with some Forms they have been hitherto at liberty about, upon the severest Penalties, in case of refusal, I cannot well conceive what these Men could have to say for themselves.

But let it be examin'd a little, from what Sources this Creed-making, this Church-paleing Humour, must arise. And in this Enquiry, Three Causes very readily occur to my Apprehensions, viz. Pride, Knavery, or Priestcraft, and Enthusiasm.

1. Pride is very likely to have a large Share in this spiritual Tyranny. Ambition, and Vain-Glory, may put a great many foremost in these Impositions, because there is room for Distinction and Preheminence; whereas the liberty of Thinking, Chusing, and Talking, as every one is guided by his own Conceptions of Things, puts all reasonable Beings upon a Level: In the former Way, a good Faculty at Believing, and an artful Management thereof, may raise some Men into great Power, and Honour, and throw them into all the Gratifications a proud Heart can desire, but the latter promises no other Enjoyments, besides what flow from a good Conscience, and the sincere Approbation of those who covet no other Superiority, than in being Wise and Vertuous, and who hate all Dominion, but what gives Opportunities of making others the better for it. Besides, we shall generally find most Persons of this Complexion of Faith, as obstinate as possible against others carving out for them ; that it is too plain, their fondness for Creeds, Articles, and Tests, are only because they expect a Part in the making them ; and upon an impartial Review, I fear it will be found true, that the Zeal of our present Creed, or Article-makers, has been pretty much in Proportion to the Share they expected in composing them.

2. This Practice is so well calculated for the support of a false Authority, which may, as far as I can see, be indifferently called, either Knavery or Priestcraft, that it is impossible for the Subsistence of that without it. The Clergy of the Romish Church have learned to play this Game with admirable Dexterity, insomuch that the Laity have not only their Consciences, but their Souls too, devolved in their Custody. If it is once given up to the Parson to prescribe the Rule of my Faith, the Consequences of Non-Compliance are solely in his Power, and all that's valuable in this World, may be demanded at Pleasure, as a Purchase of the Parson's Interest in another. But, in this View, all the Tricks, and Leger-de-main of Rome, so naturally drawn into the same Prospect, that I would, by no means, have any one who bears the Name of Protestant, be seen in the same Picture.

3. Enthusiasm, however, gives a great deal of room to a Faith-Maker, without bearing too hard upon his Integrity. A Person who is weak enough to found Pretensions to a continual Inspiration, upon a Revelation once given, may palm Creeds upon us every Day, because he has all at first Hand, and bring every thing immediately from Heaven: But this is a Distinction, I dare say, these Gentlemen are not fond of coming into. To all those who do, I am entirely for giving them the Liberty of venting, so that they hurt not the State, nor the Peace of Society; and rather than do them the Credit of a serious Opposition, I am in the Opinion of a very considerable Author, to apply to them the Ridicule, being fully satisfied, that Heresy is much sooner to be destroyed in a Droll, than at the Stake.

I cannot possibly distinguish between one Infallibility and another, and, without out immediate Inspiration, no Pretensions of that kind, can be supported ; none but the Enthusiast then can be allowed to be a Faith-Maker, with any Consistency. If we go off from the Words of Inspiration, we must go to some Body inspired, or else we mend not the Matter. But if it is not allowed, that there are such Persons, with what safety can we leave our Bibles in Matters of Faith ? I know no difference between one Man and another in this Case ; and I take my self as excusable to go to the Pope, as to any of these Gentlemen. What avails the Reformation, and our Renunciation of the Impositions of Rome, if we practise them upon one another ? It is not the Crucifix, the Beads, and other Pegeaantries of the Romish Church, that is the chief Grounds of Separation from them, but their Lording it over our Faith, their Usurpations in Christ's Kingdom, and assuming what only belongs to God, or Men immediately taught by Him ; how then can we claim the same Power our selves ? There is no Medium ; if the inspired Writings are defective, as to a Rule of Faith, and if humane Interpretations, humane Dicisions, and humane Forms, are necessary for our Conduet and Assistance, we may as well go to Rome, as to any any other Humane Authority ; but if the inspired Writings are a sufficient Rule of Faith, and we are required to adhere to them as such, and not to rely upon, or take up with, any humane Interpretations, as the Measure of our Belief and Practice, then we are no more justified in resting upon, or giving heed to, a Creed made at Salters-Hall, than one made at the Vatican ; and, to all Intents and Purposes, does Mr. Bradbury, or any of those Gentlemen offend as much against the Authority of Christ, in requiring a Compliance to Creeds of their making, as Tests of Faith and Orthodoxy, as the Pope himself does; or any other Authority in the romish Church ; What signifies the Name Protestant, and railing against Rome in Trifles, while we practice among our selves the worst of her Impostures ? A Man may flatter himself with what Distinctions he pleases, but if he maintains the Essentials of Popery, as every Creed-maker does, he shall ever be, in my account, a Papist ; and let the Orthodox of Salters-Hall get off the Imputation as well as they can.

Before these Gentlemen, therefore, who dissent from their Brethren, in making the Scriptures only a Rule of Faith, and a Belief in them only, a Condition of Church-

Church-Membership, go on any further in imposing their own Inventions for those great Purposes, it is well if they would cool a little, and consider the Consequences of their Conduct. Their Endeavours to frustrate the Authority of those Divisions in open Assembly, by private Subscriptions, without Doors, which they are now labouring for, will not only render the pacifick Schemes concerted for their own Advantage, as well as the Honour of the Government, abortive, and of no Effect, but also lay a Foundation for all the Hardships, that a Superior Power may at any Time hereafter, think fit to put upon themselves; they can never, with any tolerable Countenance, disclaim against Persecution, who, in their Turns, have been Persecutors: For the imposing any Matter in Christianity, as essential thereunto, which is not so, on the Penalty of exclusion from christian Communion, for non-compliance, is the worst of Persecution, to every one who makes Conscience of Social Worship, and of commemorating the Death and Redemption of Jesus Christ, with all of the same Faith in him, upon those essential Points.

I cannot but think, when I hear what a Bustle some make about Orthodoxy, and soundness of Faith, that such forget themselves to be Men, because if they did not, they would consider that every Man is Orthodox to himself: As we are all then to be allowed fallible, and variously determined in our Judgments, by an Infinite almost of Accidents and Circumstances, why should the particular Turn of one Man's Mind, be made the Standard of another's Rectitude in Thinking? The assumption, therefore, of any Credenda, which some Men can come into, to be made a Rule for all others, is what belongs not to a fallible Being, let them never so much bear the Stamp of Orthodoxy, because there are no opposite Propositions that have any Believers, but are every jot as Orthodox to those who believe them: And, as every Man is to answer for himself only in such Cases, it is the highest Arrogancy, as well as the highest Folly, for any other to prescribe a Rule for his Conduct, in Matters of Belief. Any Person, therefore, who duly reflects upon his own Fallibility, will never pretend to obtrude his own Determinations upon others, nor be uneasy with others, for concluding differently,

if they agree but in such Essentials as are inseparable from Sincerity, and Integrity of Mind.

How far the abovemention'd Sources of Orthodoxy, might influence our present Creed makers, I will not pretend to determine ; Three of them, particularly I hear, had brought new Draughts for a Creed ; but they not readily answering to the Demand of Infallibility, the pious Workmanship was returned upon their Hands ; which gave such a mortifying Shock to those Gentlemen, as may not be easy to express ; but on the Returns, and Glowings of Resentment, when the Paroxysm was strong upon them, they might naturally enough call to mind, the Description of the Sibyl's Agonies in Virgil :

— Subito non Vultus, non Color unus, Non comptæ mansere comæ ; sed Pectus an-( helum,
Et Rabie fera Cordatum ; majorq; videri
Nec mortale sonans : afflata est Numine ( qando

Jam propiore Dei —

And again ;

— Immanis in Antro

Bacchatur Vates, magnum si Peccore possit
Excusisse Deum —

One of this hopeful Triumvirate is, it seems, the Successor of Mr. Flemming, at Founders-Hall; but in this Conduct, he appears but very ill to have Copied after that worthy Minister, who in a Discourse titled, An Account of Religion as it centers in Christ, thus declares himself on this Point of Creed-making.

" Tho' I pay all due Diference to " the Confessions of Faith, made by " the reformed Churches, and more par" ticularly that excellent One compo" sed by the Assembly at Westminster ;
 " yet I cannot otherwise subscribe to " any humane Composition, as the Foun" dation of my Faith, but in as far as " it self is founded on the holy Word " of God, which I must own to be my " only Creed, Confession of Faith, and
 " System of Divinity, in the strictest and " most proper Sense. For it is in obe" dience to Christ, that I am obliged " to call no Man Father of my Religion,
 " but God, nor any Man the infallible
 " Teasher of it, but Himself. "

But the most wonderful Circumstance of this Affair, is, that Mr. Bradbury too should be amongst the Prophets, and become a New Revelation-maker; there seems to be no manner of Connexion between a Flaming Loyalty, and the Calenture of Orthodoxy; hallowing for King George in the Streets, and voting for Slavery within Doors; the Hazza's of a Mob, and the Decrees of a Synod; the Mirth of a Song, and the Severity of a Creed: And yet so it is, this merry Soneteer, is become a most orthodox Father, who can account for it? There was, indeed, some Affinity between being a facetious Companion, and a witty Preacher; between the Levity of a Fest, and Whipt-Cream Divinity; and it may be accounted for, how the Laugh of Conversation should froth over again, and trifle pleasantly in a Pulpit. How agreeably pretty was an Expression of this Gentleman concerning the Athanasian Creed, that it was a twirl of Words fitter for a Chymist than a Christian? Who at that Time could have thought it, that he himself should set up for a Twirler, and practice the Chymist upon his Neighbours, who had been so unsufferably Witty against Imposture?
 . . . . .
 seems

Sir, I desire your Excuse for this Levity, the Mirth of the Subject is catching, and there is no speaking of Mr. Bradbury in any other Turn. The Solemnity leminity of the Cloak cannot conceal the Humour of the Bottle ; and the Familiarity of plain Tom, will never be able to throw off an Acquaintance into the Distance that is due to reverend Tom, tho' guarded with all the Artillery of his Spiritualities.

After this general Account of this Transaction, and these Reflections upon the Obstructions given therein, by proud, angry Men, I come to the most agreeable Part of my Design, viz. To congratulate with you, upon the Honour done to the Dissenters, as a Body, by the Majority of their Ministers declaring for Liberty, in the fullest and most important Acceptation of that Term. And in this Part, I conceive it necessary to take notice of some part of the Charge brought against Dissenters, by the Writer of their Conduct considered.

There they stand accused, for such a Narrowness of Principle, and such a Severity of Behaviour, as makes it even unsafe for the Government to trust them in Places of Power, and throws them out of a Right to all those Privileges, which are the Consequence of the Bishop of Bangor's Doctrine of Liberty. I know not of what Prejudice it can be to give it it up to that Author, for Argument's sake, that they have been narrow enough, and have behaved themselves sufficiently blameable, on some particular Conjuncture's; but with what Justice can they be thus charged now? We have seen national and popular Reformations, as well as personal; a Community, therefore, is no more to be upbraided with past Errors, after they have renounced them, than any single Penitent with past Crimes. If they have been misled in Points of Conscience, and Christian Freedom, they have seen their Error, and have now resolved to conduct themselves by more generous Principles. They have pronounced it reasonable to give the same Allowance to others in Dissenting from them, as they require in excuse for their own Dissentions; and as they deny Infallibility to others, so they disclaim it in themselves.

I shall not pretend to be so particular as some, in accounting for this happy Change, and think it not worth Disputing about its chief Motives; and am willing enough to own, as some will have it, that the generous Sentiments of the Bishop of Bangor, and his noble Defences, and Explanations of the Doctrine of Liberty, both Civil and Religious, gious, has had a great Share herein, as likewise that the Example, and Conduct of the present Government, hath had a great Influence in defusing a publick Spirit, and rendering Humanity, Charity, Forgiveness, and all the true Attributes of a generous Mind, the most fashionable Virtues.

This happy Union of his Majesty's Subjects in true Principles of Liberty, will, it is to be hoped, be a great Addition to that collective Power of the Nation, in defeating all Projects and Attempts that may affect our Constitution, and tend to introduce Slavery of any sort. And I cannot but on this Occasion, let my Thoughts run so forward into Futurity, as to imagine somewhat like the following, may be the composition of an Historian, in Ages to come.

" Ever since the grand Reformation,
 " from the Errors of Rome, and the setting
 " up a National Protestant Church,
 " that allow'd no Head under Jesus Christ, but the regal Power ; there
 " continu'd an uneasy Dissention therefrom
 " amongst some who were yet for carrying the Work further : They were
 " at first called by the general Name of " Puritans, because they asserted a greater " Purity,

" Purity in Religion, than the national reformed Church, but after some Time,
 " they broke out into many subordinate
 " Distinctions; who often likewise gave " Uneasiness to one another. The " Legislature sometimes put them under " Restraints and Hardships ; but such " Measures were found generally to ren" der them more obstinate, and to streng" then their Interest ; and thus, as the " Policy, or Caprice of the Administration,
 " gave them more or less Liberty, did " they continue more or less united with " one another ; but it was always obser" ved, that the easier they were made by " their Superiors, the more uncharitably
 " they behaved amongst themselves, in-
 " somuch that they would often practise
 " the same Impositions, as to Matters of " Faith and Discipline, upon their Bre" thren, as they complained against with " bitterness in the national Church, and " all other Churches. But in the Reign " of K. George the Ist, Affairs were tran" sacted with so much Candor, Justice,
 " and good Sense, that a publick Spirit run
 " thro' the whole Kingdom : The Parli- " ament repealed Acts that laid some par" ticular Subjects under Disqualifications
 " for Service, and put the Dissenters up" on a Foot with their fellow Subjects ;
 " and the Dissenters themselves, by a

" Synod, or an Assembly of their Ministers in the City of London, passed some Articles in Form as Tests of Communion and Church-Membership, wherein nothing was made necessary thereunto, but a Belief in the inspired Writings; and the Holy Scriptures alone were made the Rule of their Faith. There were indeed some violent Tempers, who opposed these christian Measures, and were yet for retaining humane Forms for Articles of Faith; but they were out-voted, and the good Sense, and benevolent Conduct of that Reign, soon won them over to Conviction, or shamed them out of their Obstinacies, and spiritual Impositions. To this good Disposition, very much contributed the Preaching and Writings of an eminent Prelate, first Bishop of Bangor, —— who, notwithstanding great Opposition, at last silenced all his Enemies, entirely vanquished the Remains of Papacy, and brought christian Liberty, and a reasonable Religion, into the greatest Esteem, Thus, Sir, altho' a Stranger to you personally, I have been free in laying my Thoughts before you on this Affair; and I hope this Freedom will not draw any Resentment, or Invective upon you, by those who may be displeased hereby, that can give a good Man any Uneasiness: Their Temper I know too well, but their Power, I thank God, is restrained. That you may long live to assist in the propagation of Principles of Liberty and true Religion, and in defeating Superstition, an' Priest-craft, is the sincere Wish of your most humble Servant, &c.

P O S T C R I P T.

SOME Uneasiness I have been under, at the Freedom taken with your Name, in the foregoing Narrative and Remarks, and at the Publication of Matters much fitter for Concealment, is now entirely removed; and I find my first Inducements thereunto, from the Apprehensions of having it mangled and falsified in the common Papers, justified by the Flying-Post of last Saturday.

By what hath been already said, it too much appears, with what Injustice, Vehemency, and even ill-Manners it was managed on the Part of the Creed-makers, or Orthodox, when debating in open Assembly; but that when they were out-Voted, they should palm themselves up-on the World for the London Ministers, by a common Intelligence, and abuse and falsify their Brethren who were a Majority, by the same Conveyance, is such a Sample of holy Fury, and orthodox Honesty, as cannot be matched in History; but a Fool's Coat, it seems, is of equal use to all kinds of Imposture; and Orthodoxy, as well as Physick, a Creed as well as a Pacquet, may have its Advantage in being handed to the Mob in such a Dress.

I have not leisure, at present, to take due Notice of all the Falsehood, which these pious London Ministers have thought fit to convey through that reputable Informer the Flying-Post, and shall therefore only observe to you, upon a Passage or two that are plain Contradictions.

The main Question here, as before taken Notice, is wilfully misrepresented, for it was never suffered to be put what Opinion the Ministers present were of, with relation to the Trinity, but whether any humane Compositions on that Head should be made a Test of Church-Membership. This was before said to be carry'd in the Negative by a Majority, and for Reasons already given: All private Reasons, then with the Minority for making somewhat of that kind a Test, and their Protests, and Proceeding afterwards, signify'd nothing as to the Authority of that Assembly, and were to all Intents and Purposes extrajudicial. The Harangues therefore of their hopeful Advocate, about the Boasts of Dr. C——ks Disciples, the Soundness of their Test-Articles, and the Imputation of Anti-Trinitarianism, can have no other Effect than to shew a great deal of Pride and ill Nature, as well as Folly; for what Success could such an Assemblie possibly hope for, in putting a stop to the Differences amongst their Brethren thren in the Country, when they actually should go into Parties with them, upon the very Subject, about which they were in difference? But to be an Anti-Trinitarian, it seems, is something so dreadful, that those Men are resolv'd to get rid of it, tho' at the expence of their Christianity, and rather than be unsound in Doctrine, will be inhumane and unsocial in their Behaviour.

The rest of this Scribler's Falsification I shall take Notice of in his own Words:

' For these Reasons, the Forms above-written, and no other, were offer'd: And
 ' the Body of London Ministers, to the ' Number of Threescore, personally and di' stinctly subscrib'd bout the Articles, and
 ' Answers, as expressive of the Scripture
 ' Doctrine of the Holy Trinity, which ' therefore they heartily believe, and ' gladly bore their publick Testimony to.

' These Sixty, without pretending to ' impose upon any, invited their Brethren
 ' to join with them in the same Declara-
 ' ration and Subscription, but could not ' have the Satisfaction of obtaining it; but ' instead of this, the rest proceeded by ' themselves, to the Consideration of the ' Paper of Advices, as more agreeable to ' their Inclination, and pass'd 'em as they ' pleas'd. Upon which, they that sub-' scrib'd had nothing left them to do, but as

‘ as the BODY of the Ministers of London, ‘ in a solemn Message by Two of their ‘ Members, to PROTEST against all ‘ Proceedings of the rest in their absence,
 ‘ and so left the Place.

‘ They that refus’d to subscribe the ‘ forefaid Article and Answers concerning ‘ the Trinity, staid behind, to the Num‘ ber of Fifty ; of which, near one third ‘ could not be reckon’d stated Ministers in ‘ or near London, much less Pastors of ‘ Churches there ; but collected from far, ‘ out of several Counties, and to serve the ‘ Purposes of those that sent for ’em : And ‘ what is represented with so assuming an ‘ Air, in the Account publish’d, as re- ‘ solv’d, and asserted, and finish’d, and ‘ carry’d, &c. is, after all, to be under‘ stood only as what was done by this ‘ mixt Company that staid behind, and ad-‘ journ’d themselves from time to time, ‘ calling in what new Numbers they ‘ could, after the Body of the Ministers of ‘ London had born their Testimony and ‘ Protest as above, and were withdrawn..

Herein you will observe, that the Number 53, who voted for a humane Test, is increased to 60 ; and 57, the Number against it, sunk to 50, with the Addition of the impudent Calumny of their not being above two Thirds stated Ministers.

But the most remarkable Absurdity that that a blind Zeal hath thrown this Relater into, is, That he should assume a Majority, call them, the Body of the Ministers of London, &c. and yet bring them into a Protest against the other Side, the Minority, and leave the Chair, and Place of Assembly, for them to continue acting in, in Form, until the whole they came about was finished. It is a Matter blameable enough, in Point of Order and Decency, for a Minority, in any Assembly where the Authority of their Decisions is taken from the Votes of the greater Number, to dispute the Legality and Force of any thing so passed, and much more to oppose to, or bring into Competition, the Opinion of the lesser with that of the greater Number; and this is what was never suffered in any civilized Communities; and yet these very orthodox Gentlemen, not only behave with Rudeness and Ill-manners to a Majority, by which they are out-voted in open Assembly, and contest the Validity of their Decisions; but in the most scandalous Conveyance possible, falsely hand it to the World, that they are the Majority; tho' with this Self-Contradiction, at the same Time, that they Protested against the other, and left the Place: For it was never before known, that the greater Number quitted the Place of Business for the lesser, lesser, and had occasion to Protest against their Proceedings. These Gentlemen, indeed, are very fit to be trusted with Creed-making for others, who have not Integrity enough to relate a Matter of Fact, without Perversion and Falshood ! But, with the Trade of Rome, they may, perhaps, engross her Policies too ; with her Infallibility, put on her Honesty, and be as crafty, as they are Orthodox.

I know, Sir, it must be yours, and every good Man's Concern, and Shame, to see or hear of these Things ; but some Alleviation it is to such a Concern, that Truth and Integrity have fair Play against Craft and Imposture. And let these Men carry their Enthusiasmick or political Fury of Orthodoxy as far as they please, they may depend upon it, that in these Times of Liberty, Openess, and Forbearance, they will be marked amongst the Disturbers of our Peace.

We are now allarmed with an Invasion in favour of a Popish Prince ; and the very same Reasons that make me against their Success, determine me also to be against those Invaders of our Faith : For I had as lieve another Man should have the Property of my Person, or Estate, as of my Conscience, and my Understanding. I am, &c.
